Arizona Rural Hospital Facilities and Market Study

The Arizona Health Facilities Authority has sponsored a comprehensive examination of Arizona's rural hospital facilities. All of Arizona's 34 rural hospitals participated in the study, including those managed by the Indian Health Service (IHS) and two by Arizona Indian nations. The study was prepared by Health Solutions and Market Intelligence, Inc. under a contract with the Rural Health Office of the University of Arizona Mel and Enid Zuckerman College of Public Health.

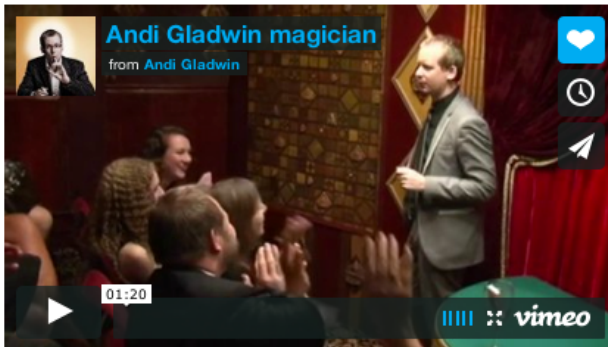

The study determined Arizona needs 290 additional hospital beds, 230 additional physicians, and $2.1 billion in capital for new hospital construction, renovation, and equipment to serve the growing health needs of Arizona's rural population. Among the 17 recommendations included in the study were several calls to action for the Arizona Legislature including developing a technical assistance program for critical access hospitals that need new facilities, examining new methods for providing incentives to physicians and nurses willing to practice in Arizona's rural and frontier areas, and increasing the funding pool for critical access hospitals proportionate with the increase in the number of hospitals that receive this designation. Arizona's Congressional delegation is urged to provide leadership in Congress to increase appropriations for the Indian Health Service facility capital budget. The Authority is urged to support replacement facilities or renovation projects for small/critical access hospitals, including those operated by IHS and tribal affiliated organizations.

Whether you're comfortable sending emails to legislators, posting updates to Facebook, hosting events or even meeting in-person with your elected officials, there are many ways you can make a difference as an Alzheimer's Association Advocate. On this page you'll find a unique set of tools designed to educate you about our advocacy campaigns and help you in your efforts.

Advocacy Basics

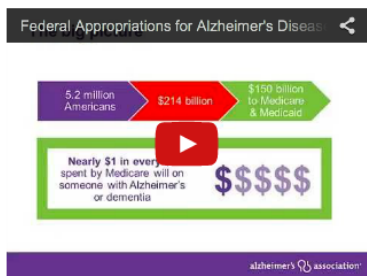

Resources

- Advocates Guide - This document is a guide to advocates who attend the annual Alzheimer's Advocacy Forum, but it also serves as a great resource for new advocates.
- Collateral/Visual Aid - This document provides a graphical view of the need for Alzheimer's research funding. It is intended to be shown to elected officials during in-person meetings. View the "How-to" video for tips on using this document.

Our Issues

Federal Funding for Alzheimer's Disease

Learn how Congress can dedicate the resources needed to accelerate the development of breakthrough treatments that would prevent, halt, or reverse the course of Alzheimer's, help the increasing number of families living with Alzheimer's and keep pace with Alzheimer's steadily mounting economic impact.

Resources for Tribal Museums

The National Museum of the American Indian (NMAI) seeks to support the museum practices of tribal museum professionals and tribal nations. Leaders of tribal nations and tribal museums often ask for resources and information in the areas of fundraising, exhibit design, collections management and conservation, and leadership development. Links to resources on these topics—as well newer topics including social media, security, and environmentally friendly practices—are provided below. These resources are intended to be useful to those who work or volunteer at a tribal museum, wish to build a tribal museum, or want to learn more about tribal museum history. (Note: The term “museum” is used in this context solely for brevity and may not be appropriate or adequately describe the purpose of your organization. Please substitute any word that best describes your organization, such as cultural center or research center.)

The NMAI also seeks to facilitate networking and communication between tribal museums, and welcomes opportunities to provide appropriate information about tribal nations and tribal museums to national and international museum communities. To facilitate those kinds of exchanges, the museum administers a tribal museum Listserv (emailing list); if you would like to be added please contact Jill Norwood at norwoodj@si.edu.

The information on this page is a continuation of work begun many years ago at the NMAI by Alyce Sadongei (Kiowa/Tohono O’odham), Nicolasa Sandoval (Chumash), Susan Secakuku (Hopi), Karen Coody Cooper (Cherokee), and Jacquetta Swift (Comanche). The foresight, initiative, and wisdom of these women has contributed significantly to the museum field by providing ways for Native peoples to establish a place in a field that was historically off-limits. They helped lay the foundation for tribal museum professional training and exemplify commitment to education and public service.

How to Start a Tribal Museum

This presentation \(pdf\) provides basic information on starting a tribal museum, including why your community may wish to do so. It focuses on both creating a thoughtful and thought-provoking discussion (defining key terms, developing a mission statement, thinking about content) and beginning the planning phase of the project (defining key jobs, putting together a planning team). For information about the architectural phase, construction phase, developing exhibition design, and presenting public programs, contact Jill Norwood at norwoodj@si.edu.
